Mrs. Hope, of Hersey, Mich., is a guest at the residence of her brother, N. Ross, in the Sixth Ward.

The Ladies Aid Society, of the Congregational church, met with Mrs. Clarence Olson Wednesday afternoon.

J. H. Germond, of Iron Belt, agent for the Wisconsin Central R. Co., was in this city last week visiting his relatives.

Ralph Rouse took a vacation last week, and went to Weyauwega to visit his parents. He returned Monday and is again busy at work at the store of C. M. & W. W. Fendler.

The Redmond Dramatic Co. drew a good audience Saturday night, to witness their rehearsing play, "Cyclone," which was well played by the entire company. All the performances during the week were very good and the entire company are courteous people and will always be well received.

A beet sugar factory is to be built at Merrillan, to be completed by October 1, 1897. It will be owned by the Northwestern Beet Sugar Company, with a capital stock of $400,000, $500,000 of which is already signed. Articles of incorporation are on file with the secretary of state Monday.

Geo. Gamon, who lives out at Junco Park, met with what came near proving a serious accident for him, last Saturday. He was returning home from town, when the horse got frightened and became unmanageable, running away and smashing things up generally. Geo. fortunately escaped without injury.

The Westfield (Ind.) News prints the following in regard to an old resident of that place: "Frank McVoy, for many years in the employ of the L. N. & C. Ry. here, says: 'I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for ten years or longer—can never without it in my family. I consider it the best remedy of the kind manufactured. I take pleasure in recommending it.' It is a specific for all bowel disorders. For sale at Palace Drug Store.

Merchants who carry patterns will tell you they can sell you just as reliable patterns and sell them cheaper than Gray who carries the old reliable Buttericks. Now they may be sincere. We will not accuse them. But if they are it shows their lack of experience in this line. Other patterns have been tried here and thrown out but Butterick's always "stand pat" and never were beaten.

Dr. Packard was in Chicago this week.

Miss Lizzie Price goes to Buffalo, N. Y., tonight, where she will remain.

Do not forget the date that the optician will be here at Segerstrom's.

A sacrifice sale of shoes at Gray's. The bargain counter is overflowing.

Eyes examined free of charge at Segerstrom's by Winburgh, May 12 and 13.

Giles Coon and Mr. A. Fall went to State Line Saturday to put in a few days trout fishing.

Mrs. A. G. Hunter and sister, Mrs. West, were in Chicago last week. They arrived home Sunday morning.

Mrs. E. J. Berry is in this city for a short visit with relatives and friends. She is the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. L. Jenkinson.

Don't forget you can have your gloves fitted by laying them at Gray's. Every pair warranted that sells for over 50c.

"Be sure you are right then go ahead" is the good old adage. Buy Butterick's patterns and go ahead for you surely are right. Gray keeps them.

"Two phases of married life," presented at the opera house last evening under the auspices of the M. E. ladies, was well patronized, as it deserved to be.

Mrs. Germond was taken suddenly ill last Friday, and for a few days her condition was such as to alarm her friends. She is better now, and hopes are entertained of her recovery.

At the regular meeting of the school board, Monday evening, John Baras was unanimously re-elected President. No business of importance was transacted, and the board adjourned until next Monday evening.

A proposition was made to the city council, Tuesday night, by the Agricultural Society, to have the city extend the water main to the cemetery, the above society agreeing to pay $100 of the expense.

The installation exercises connected with the settlement of Rev. Kemp at the Congregational church will take place on Thursday evening, May 13. A large attendance of neighboring pastors is expected.

On Tuesday evening a number of prominent singers and others met to begin work on a "War Song Concert and Exhibition of War Scenes," to be given within four weeks. Those participating make its success quite certain.

C. W. Ryan, familiarly known as "Paddy," who has been in the employ of the American Express Co. in this city for the past two years, left Monday night for St. Paul, where he has a position as clerk in a large clothing house.

At a recent meeting of the Chippewa county agricultural society it was voted to dissolve that society and turn its grounds, etc., and what funds it had at that time, over to the Northern Wisconsin State Fair Association.

During the past week Ed. Dimick has removed his plumbing shop to the corner block, and now has everything in order. Now that he has plenty of room he will carry a full line of plumber's goods, and be ready to do all work in his line on short notice.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Rollin, who have resided in Rhinelander for the past eight years, have decided to make their permanent home at Buffalo, N. Y., for which place Mr. Rollin starts tonight. Mrs. Rollin and children are already there, having gone about a month ago to make her father a visit.

Fred. Campbell, of Three Lakes, was in Rhinelander a portion of last week. It is tough on Fred, but as this must be the county seat for him hereafter he might as well get acquainted so he can feel at home. Mr. Campbell has been chairman in the town of Three Lakes for a number of years.

S. S. Barner, of Oriental, Penn., is in Rhinelander this week. Mr. Barner had received one of the books advertising Northern Wisconsin, which were so generally distributed by the State Board of Immigration, and is here to find education to build a hard wood mill and buy some hard wood farming land.

Walter Carr, of Stoughton, Wis., is in this city for a short visit with his brother, W. W. Carr. We understand that Mr. Carr has engaged with Leonard & Co. as prescription clerk. They have made no mistake in employing him, as he has been a registered pharmacist for many years and ranks among the best in the state.

Mr. Hoffman, of Ashboro, general agent for the McCormick Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of farm machinery, was in Rhinelander Wednesday looking after business. It may not be generally known, but it is a fact that considerable farm machinery is being sold right here in Rhinelander.

Our expert piano tuner, Mr. Haynor, will be in Rhinelander on or about Thursday, the 6th. Those desiring the services of a thoroughly competent tuner and one of long experience will please have their order at Mr. Squier's jewelry store and office. L. A. & H. E. L. (Chicago, Ill.)

Verdict for Clifford.

The trial of this case, Clifford vs. the Soo Railway Company, has occupied the circuit court for the past three weeks, and resulted in a verdict for Clifford in the sum of $2,616.65 and costs. It was claimed by the plaintiff that the section men started fires to burn rubbish along the right of way, and in a careless manner allowed it to run and get beyond control, which resulted in the burning over and killing of a large amount of standing timber belonging to the plaintiff, situated in Price and Oneda counties near the village of Clifford on the Soo R. Y. This case has been in court for some time and has been shifted from Price to Taylor county, then back to Price, and recently from Price to Oneda county, and has cost Clifford in expenses much more than the assessable costs and amount of verdict just obtained. Some eight or ten attorneys have been employed on this case on both sides, whose fees alone will amount to several thousand dollars. It is understood that the jury stood 11 to 1 in favor of Clifford on the start, and that the fact as found by the jury was that the fire started near section 31 and ran north and burned over section 30, which seemed to be the main question of dispute between the parties, and damage was awarded on that section, including some other lands. It seems that this section was not included in the original demand for damage, but the complaint was allowed to be amended, and it was conceded that this territory was entitled to damage if any of it was.

Other lands than those owned by the Clifford company were burned over at the same time, and the result may be that other owners will come in for damages, inasmuch as the fact has been established that the railway company was responsible for the fire through the carelessness of their section men.

A Bad Barber.

A warrant was issued Tuesday for the arrest of a barber by the name of J. Scully, who has been employed at the Globe barber shop, and later at the shop of Geo. Fenzel, on Stevens street. The warrant was sworn out by Henry Jewett, another barber employed in the same shop. Monday evening the two young men had some trouble, Scully attempting to rob the till and was prevented by Jewett, who choked him and compelled him to put the money back. They then gave their keys to the shop to Chief McDermott, who afterward gave Jewett's back to him, and about 10 o'clock he went to his room in the same building and retired. About 1 o'clock Scully came to the building and forced the back door, evidently expecting to find no one there. When he saw Jewett in bed he grabbed him by the throat, and holding a razor in his hand told him to keep still and hand out his "pocket" or he'd cut his throat. Under the circumstances he gave him what he had—a little loose change and a gold watch and chain. He then left the building and Jewett got up and dressed himself and started after him. He overtook him on the corner of the Merchants State Bank, and as Policeman Assmusen was standing near the entrance of Chase, E. Crasoe's store, he told him to arrest the man. The policeman, knowing the two young men, thought it was a joke, and let him get by, when he took to his heels, and although they followed as fast as possible, they were unable to catch him, and up to this writing nothing has been heard of him.

A Wrong Guess.

The fourteen-year-old son of the widow Christianson, who lives in the Schurb district, about five miles from Rhinelander, was brought to the hospital Monday to be operated on. The boy has been sick for nearly three months, supposedly suffering with typhoid fever. As he grew worse quite rapidly during the past few weeks, it was thought a change of physicians might prove beneficial. Dr. Daniels was called in last Friday, and found that the child was suffering from an abscess in his side. It had grown to large proportions, making an immediate operation necessary. He was accordingly brought to the hospital and Dr. Daniels performed the operation Tuesday. He stood it better than it was expected he could in his weakened condition, and at this writing is lying comfortably, and it is thought he will recover.

A Fine Entertainment.

Rhinelander people were given an opportunity to witness another exhibition of the wonderful magazine, Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week, which was even more entertaining than the one given here last week. They were enabled to connect with the bright dynamo this time, which gave a much stronger light and brought out the views clearer. The views showing the Black Diamond Express coming at full speed, with all the noise of a regular train, the Hurle Race, the excellent work and the Serpentine dance by Lake Park, were among the best and most real shown, but they were all first-class. The photograph added much to the entertainment. Only a small audience was present, but should the young men come this way again they would undoubtedly have a full house.

The Biggest Lie.

Capt. S. F. Pollett has got on the track of the biggest liar in Rhinelander and he will publicly expose him in his special meeting in the mission hall on Saturday night, May 8. Everybody is invited to attend.

Died Without Warning.

Ben McCall, who has been living on a homestead about five miles from this city with Chris Thompson, died suddenly last Thursday afternoon.

The two men had been at work hauling sand during the forenoon, and about 11 o'clock McCall complained of a pain in the region of the heart and said he thought he would go to the house and see if he could do anything to relieve it. At noon Mr. Thompson went in to prepare some dinner for them, and asked the man how he was feeling. He replied that he felt better, and would probably be all right in a short time. He expired almost immediately afterward. He has no relatives here except a brother, who is working in one of the mills. His remains were brought to this city Friday morning and buried.

He was about 40 years old and unmarried.

No Truth in the Reports.

Mr. Frank Schmidt, a young man in the employ of O. Hilgerman in this city, has been caused a great deal of annoyance during the past week, by the published reports regarding him in the Chicago papers.

He arrived here the fore part of last week, and was somewhat surprised to learn, upon after his arrival, that he had been accused and charged with $150, and his friends were greatly alarmed. He immediately notified his parents, who reside at Omaha, that he was all right, and that there was no truth in the report. Then came the story that a wealthy brewer from St. Louis had disappeared from Chicago. He was reported to be insane and had been located at Rhinelander, where his brother wanted to get him. The facts are that Mr. Hilgerman sent for the young man, who was at his home at Omaha, to come and work for him in his brewery. He came through Chicago, and while in that city called to see the professors at the Brewing Academy of Wahl & Helms, which he attended for two or three years. The professors were out when he called, so he left his card, saying he would call again if he had time. He didn't get around to go to the academy again, and as there had been some correspondence between him and these gentlemen in regard to his taking a position in Cincinnati, they telegraphed there to find if he was there. He thinks when the word came from Cincinnati that he was not there, the professors were alarmed and made some inquiries, and that report originated from that. He can account for it in no other way.

He wrote to his people again, and Mr. Hilgerman also wrote to them, assuring them that he was perfectly sane, and that the reports published were all a mistake. When it was found that he was certainly in this city, his brother from St. Louis, Mo., telegraphed him to meet him at the 11 o'clock train Saturday morning, which he did. After seeing him and being convinced that he was all right, he left the same morning at 7 o'clock for Minneapolis.

Mr. Schmidt will remain with Mr. Hilgerman and attend to his brewery business.

Beers & Co. make prices on clothing to conform to the times.

Will Shannon, who was employed with the firm of Dean & Clark during the winter, has accepted a position with C. M. & W. W. Fendler.

A blaze in a small cottage near Brown Bros' boarding house on the North Side, called out the fire department Friday. It was quickly extinguished, but little damage was done.

John Ross, who removed to Vans Harbor, Mich., about two years ago, has returned to Rhinelander with his family and will remain here permanently. He will do a general blacksmithing business at his old shop opposite the Rapids House.

Rev. E. N. Hawley, Rhinelander, was in the village Tuesday, and conducted services at the L. O. G. T. Hall in the evening. Mr. Hawley will probably arrange to be here on Sunday during the summer months. The distance over is nearly twenty miles and the road is a pretty fair one the entire way.—Three Lakes Enterprise.

E. S. Shepard, of this city, has got up very fine maps of Vilas and Oneda counties. These maps are intended for wall maps and show all of the latest topography of the respective counties. He also has got up a pocket Plat Book of everything—some 70 towns from 25 north to state line of Ranges 4 to 11 inclusive, on a scale of one inch to the mile. The State Park lands will be finely shaded on the Plat Book. Price of either county map, one dollar each, and the pocket Plat Book $5.00. Send applications to E. S. SHEPARD, Rhinelander, Wis.

For Sale. Cedar Shingles and Hemlock Plank. STEVENS LUMBER CO.

Now is the Time to get a Home. The Chicago & North-Western Railway has just published a newspaper called the North-Western Home-Seeker, giving facts about the great State of South Dakota and the advantages it possesses for the pursuits of agriculture, dairying and cattle raising. Lands can be had at present upon most favorable terms, and there is every indication of large immigration into the state this season. Correspondence is solicited from intending settlers, and a copy of the paper will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kiskern, 22 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

STATISTICS show that the profession is more prone to than any other. During the years the number of suicides among physicians has been 43, 43 and 47 per annum. One of nearly one to 70 has been suggested that a nation of this tendency may be the development of morbid the mind of a doctor, on account of constant association with the dying, or of an actual indifference to death, or because he has the knowledge of how to die painlessly.

OUR NATIONAL MUSEUM.

Better Known to the Public than the Smithsonian Institution.

Founded with Funds Left to the United States by James Smithson, an Englishman with a Terrible Grudge.

[Special Washington Letter.] On that delightful reservation in Washington known as the "Mall," or Smithsonian grounds, there stands one of the most famous buildings in the world, namely, the "Smithsonian Institution." Although it is not one of the largest buildings in the world, it is architecturally remarkable. It is built of Seneca brownstone, and the Gothic style of architecture makes it resemble one of the ancient feudal castles with towers and battlements and embrasures like loopholes, reminding one of the ancient battles of the nobles when they fought with arrows instead of guns. Inside, the prospect is very different from that of an ancient feudal castle, for there one finds not fierce-bearded barons with their ladies crouching behind them in fear of the coming foe, with their army of soldiers, trenchmen, vassals, serfs, servants, hirelings and minions. Next to the British museum, the greatest museum on earth, it is a museum not only of exhibit, but of education and for the diffusion of knowledge.

Here comes the peculiar and, one might almost say, romantic feature of this institution; for, at Genoa, Italy, on the 27th day of June, and in the year 1829, one of the noblest men that ever lived, James Smithson, bequeathed to the United States of America the whole of his fortune, amounting in American money to about $500,000. To found, according to the terms of the will at Washington, under the name of "The Smithsonian Institution," an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men.

A death is an ordinary occurrence, and to a bequest; but, for an exile from his own home, a gentleman by birth and education and of the highest scientific attainments, laboring under the bar sinister (for he was an illegitimate son of the duke of Northumberland), and with an almost broken heart at the odium cast upon him by his kinsmen, to die in a foreign land and leave his whole possessions to the government of another land than that which gave him birth, is, at least, a novelty, if not a romance.

Born in France, where his English mother had gone to escape the odium of her disgrace, he passed the early days of his life in the solitude of Oxford schools, where, in the year of 1855, he was graduated with honors from the Pembroke college, receiving the degree of master of arts from that institution. In early life he was known as Lewis James Maceo, that being his mother's name. He did not assume his father's name until he had achieved some scientific attainments. His father had been Sir Hugh Smithson before his marriage to the daughter of Lord Percy had enabled him to assume defaulting in the payment of interest and settling up a counterclaim of indebtedness against the United States. The congress then made the Smithsonian bequest good by placing to the credit of the Smithsonian Institution in the treasury of the United States the sum of $250,000; and so it was that the Smithsonian Institution, as it now is, was begun. Its officers are the president of the United States, the vice president, the chief justice of the supreme court, the members of the cabinet, three senators, three representatives, two residents of the District of Columbia, three residents of different states, a secretary and an assistant secretary. The secretary is the chief officer.

The first secretary, Joseph Henry, served from 1846 to 1878. The second secretary, Spencer Fullerton Baird, from 1878 to 1887, and the third and present secretary, Samuel Pierpont Langley, from 1887 until this date. The publications of the Smithsonian Institution form a library in themselves, and are called "The Annual Reports," "The Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections," "Bulletins of the National Museum," "The Annual Reports of the Bureau of Ethnology," and "The Bulletin of the Bureau of Ethnology."

These books are given to educational institutions all over the world. In return for these, and by purchase, the institution has received a library of 200,000 volumes, which is deposited in the congressional library for safe keeping. In 1851, a new library was built, at a cost of $250,000, to accommodate the growing needs of the National museum, whose collections of wonderful curiosities had become so large that the original building was no longer able to hold it. The bureau of exchange establishes communication with scholars in all parts of the world, by which their publications are exchanged for publications of similar societies.

The bureau of American ethnology has preserved all the vocabularies of the different types of American Indians in substantial volumes. Their indefatigable author, Powell, who has been in charge of the bureau since 1879, has undertaken many important expeditions to the west, notably among the tribes of Utah, California, Arizona and New Mexico, by which the stock of knowledge added to American ethnology has been very largely increased. The important expeditions of the Stevensons, Cushing, Fawcett and the Muddells among the Pueblo Indians and the ruins of the southwest; those of Holmes, among the prehistoric quarry cities and villages of the eastern part of the continent; those of Thomas, among the mounds of the Mississippi valley and of the northeast section, among the Popago and Seri Indians of the southwest, have also been conducted under the authority of the bureau of ethnology.

The Zoological park was established by the act of congress in the year 1890 for the preservation of such American animals as were then on the verge of extinction. The park is situated north of Washington, in the beautiful precinct of Rock creek, contains 167 acres, and is the largest of its kind in the world. Besides the original bequest of Smithsonian, congress every year makes an additional appropriation for the maintenance of the institution.

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS.

Encampment Dates. Adj. Gen. Boardman has issued an order naming dates for the encampment of the various regiments in the state as follows: Second regiment, July 11 to 17, inclusive; Third regiment, July 18 to 24, inclusive; First regiment, August 1 to 7, inclusive; Fourth regiment, August 8 to 14, inclusive. All companies will go into camp on Sundays by special trains and will return on Saturdays. Capt. Edwin P. Andrus has been detailed by the secretary of war as inspecting officer during the encampment. The camp this year will be known as Camp King, in honor of Gen. Charles King.

Will Settle a Quarrel. J. A. Van Cleave, secretary of the Wisconsin Taxpayers' association, returned to Marinette from Madison, after waiting until Gov. Scofield signed the bill detaching all of range 11 from Forest county and attaching it to Oneida and Vilas counties. This law will, he claims, remove the disturbing faction from Forest county, and the nonresident taxpayers will save $50,000 a year. Pelican Lake, where the town hall was fired on election day, is put into Forest county.

Big Concern in Trouble. Solon W. Perrin has been appointed by Judge Jenkins receiver for the Superior Consolidated Land company. The company owns the larger part of East Superior, and has a capital stock, said to be paid up, of $1,000,000, but the collapse of the boom and stringency of the times involved it in financial difficulties. Its secured indebtedness aggregates about $500,000, $100,000 of which is taxes, while the floating indebtedness is said to be about 200,000 more.

Bridges Washed Away. Three bridges were washed away by the breaking of a 1,000-foot log jam and gorge on the Annick river 12 miles from Superior. The greatest damage was done to the iron bridge at the head of the St. Croix river, the loss being about $9,000. The damage to the other bridges and the loss of logs will aggregate $20,000. It was feared that several million feet of logs which were tied at various points along the stream would be lost.

Is Still on Earth. On a wager of five dollars Louis Hanson, an employee of an ice company in Fond du Lac, ate 45 raw eggs in 11 minutes. He is still on earth. He broke five eggs and turned their contents into a glass. One gulp and he was ready for the next one. Eleven minutes and he was a richer man by five dollars. He seemed to feel none the worse for the exhibition and reported for work as usual the next day.

Missing Lawyer Returns. Henry Weissman, the Union Grove attorney who disappeared from his home March 26, and whom it was supposed had been robbed at Chicago and murdered, was found in a deplorable condition at the Chicago & Northwestern depot in Racine. His mind was deranged and he could not tell where he had been or where he came from. Trainmen said he had been placed on the train by a Chicago policeman.

Old Lovers United. W. R. Curtis, a merchant of Shell Lake, a widower, and Mrs. Belle Morrison, a widow, of Searsville, Ont., met in Eau Claire after 20 years' separation, and were married at the Catholic church. The couple left immediately for Shell Lake. They were engaged to be married 20 years ago but various circumstances kept them apart.

The News Condensed. Nathan Skel died in Menomonie, aged 67. He had been a resident of the county for over 40 years and served through the war in the Fifth Wisconsin regiment. The body of August F. Bruce, aged 67, who had been missing since April 7, was found in the river near the shipyard in Milwaukee. He is supposed to have fallen in the river.

Fire at Green Bay in a two-story brick building in Washington street, occupied by A. & L. Lehman, caused a loss of $14,000. At Milwaukee Conrad Ernst was convicted of manslaughter in the fourth degree. The penalty is imprisonment from two to four years. Ernst was responsible for the death of Peter Klein, a saloon keeper.

Mrs. Elizabeth Schwartz while suffering from an attack of temporary derangement consequent upon severe suffering, left her bed and was found floating in a well at Wausau. James Chalmers has resigned as president of the Plattville normal school, his resignation to take effect June 20.

Fire destroyed the Schmidt hotel in Milwaukee, and two hours later the Mineral Spring Park hotel, a popular resort near Riverside Park, was burned. Oskosh will soon have in operation the first grass twine factory in the world. It will employ 200 hands, and will make binding twine from marsh grass, something never attempted before.

Green Bay business men are to make an attempt to secure the location there of the new state reformatory. Mrs. Dr. Mary Rose, of Chippewa Falls, received a divorce from Dr. P. H. Rose, of Augusta.

Fires that swept the country north of Grantburg did considerable damage, burning buildings, fences and some stock. A shower checked the fires. Gilbert Ingram, aged 25, who resided with his son-in-law, Hiram Slack, at Plainfield, committed suicide by shooting himself. Suffering from illness was the cause.

Adolph Toellner, the five-year-old son of Adolph Toellner, was drowned in Lake Monona at Madison. Walter Hansen, ten years old, while attempting to load a freight train fell under the wheels and was wounded so that he died.

Frank W. Walker, ex-superior of the town of Wausau, died at his home in that village of intestinal trouble, aged 70 years.

TRADE REVIEW.

Situation Throughout the Country. Is Not Encouraging.

New York, May 1.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "In spite of the moderate improvement in most of the great industries, business is disappointing. Expectations of a speedy end of the war in Europe through Turkish victory have helped to depress grain. Demands of Austria and China have caused exports of $2,000,000 in gold, merchandise and other goods to be greatly increased and financial action of congress on the revenue question seems more remote. Wheat rose last Saturday nearly 2 cents, but has fallen since that day about 5 cents. This is largely because European markets did not demand after the outbreak of the war, and because events appeared to fore-shadow speedy peace, but the tidings from wheat-growing states, the receipts from farms, and the enormous exports of corn, all had influence. Corn exports have been $2,000,000 in four weeks, against $1,000,000 last year, while Atlantic exports of wheat in the same weeks, four included, have been only $2,215 bushels, against $2,000,000 last year. Nor is this surprising, for, if in the two weeks of corn only equal one bushel of wheat, two bushels of corn would cost about 20 cents, and the one bushel of wheat nearly 30 cents. Western receipts have been reduced, perhaps in part by floods and interruption of traffic. The cotton market has advanced a quarter of a cent, owing mainly to a speculative impulse from England. "Failures for the week have been 27 in the United States, against 23 last year, and 49 in Canada, against 11 last year."

A TEXAS MOB.

It Wreaks Terrible Vengeance on a Band of Murderers.

Houston, Tex., May 1.—For the murder of Henry Daniels, an old man in his dotage, a child aged seven, and a woman in the first flush of young womanhood; the ravishment of two girls, the burning of the home of their victims, two of the bodies being consumed in the flames, seven young negroes were sent to their doom by the hands of an infuriated mob of negroes, the victims also being negroes, at Sunnyside, Walter county. The victims were: Fayette Elkins, 21 years old; Will Gates, 25 years old; Louis Thomas, 20 years; Aaron Thomas, 12 years; Jim Thomas, 11 years; Henry Thomas, 12 years; and Will Williams, 15 years old. When the boys were captured they owned the committing of the crime.

Big Customs Receipts. New York, May 2.—There was a big rush of importers Saturday to pay duties, and the receipts reached $2,408,529.12, the second largest collection in the history of the New York custom house. The American Sugar Refinery company handed in one check of $250,722.16, which is the biggest check received there since 1872, when A. T. Stewart drew his check for $1,000,000 for customs duties. The total collections for the month of April were $17,711,252.97, which breaks the record since 1872.

Earthquake at Lima.

Lima, Peru, May 1.—A violent earthquake disturbance, lasting about one minute, caused great alarm here at two o'clock in the morning. All the church bells were tolled to call the people to prayer, as a serious disaster was apprehended. The shocks were also felt in the suburbs of this city. No loss of life or serious damage has as yet been reported.

Would Never Do. The great theatrical manager frowned. "Ever lose your diamonds?" "No." "Ever mixed up in a newspaper scandal?" "No, sir." "Ever got divorced?" "Sir, my reputation is above reproach!" "Well, you've got a nerve to ask me to star you, with all those disadvantages."—Town Topics.

A MODERN GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"Poor man! How did you lose the sight of your eye?" "Lookin' for work, mem!"—Pick-Me-Up.

One on Albert. "By the way, Jennie, how did you like the dog show?" "Oh, Albert, wasn't it too lovely for anything? There was one dog there that had such a human face. I did admire that dog." "Indeed, did he look anything like me?" "No, not a bit. It had too much character in his countenance." Then Albert reached for his hat.—Tammany Times.

It Was Settled. "By the way," asked the former resident of the village, "did Jones and Smith ever get that dispute settled as to which one owned that strip of land?" "O, yes; that was settled some time ago." "And who got it?" "I forget the lawyer's name."—Up-to-Date.

Parasites. Mrs. McSwatt—Billiger, when I asked you to get a look for a birthday present for brother John I supposed you would select one that had at least a substantial binding. This one will fall to pieces before he has it six months. Mr. McSwatt—No it won't, Lobelia. It will last that brother of yours 100 years, in any kind of binding. It's a look on manners.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Much Stuck Up. Miss Upperton (daughter of a rich manufacturer)—Pardon me, mrs. but I have not the honor of your acquaintance. # THE STORY TELLER

A THUNDER-STORM.

The hot, hot day has slowly passed, and the welcome night has come at last. And in the west, the storm clouds are rising, dense and fast. The gathering clouds of the air are massing in black columns there. Their banners bright. Above the night, with wind, faintly, faintly, in the distance now they form, and furious elemental storm. The lightning's sheets are hung on high. With phosphorescent gleam, the lightning bolts are rending the sky. And melt in fiery stream, then through the cloud, the thunders loud. From peak to peak reverberate. Its summons jar. Both near and far. With such concussion great.

Feel from the earth the flashes fly. Eddied against the inky sky. As mortals there. Might death dare. And wrath of storm defy. More awful now is seen each flash. And louder now is heard each crash. The lightning glare. The thunders glare. The fierce battalions dash. And sudden light of rising fire. Is mounting upward, higher, higher. As furious and fast. It rides upon the blast. While puny mortals' feeble might can only look, aghast.

Now, patter, patter, patter, sound the raindrops falling all around. The wild ferment. The clouds have rent. They bleed from every wound. As a deluge descends the rain. With rush and roar of hurricane. As torrents leap. Down mountains steep. It drives across the plain. Where earth was dry and parched before. Now waters swell and rivers pour. The tainted air grows pure. For storm is nature's cure. The storm has come, the storm has passed. Has worked its Master's will. In eastern sky, still overcast. Are heard its thunders still. But in the west. In peace and rest. And brightly there the stars appear. Our Father God Has been abroad. And given His children cheer. —Sidney M. Young, in United Presbyterian.

"INSIDE"

BY DORA A. CHASE.

Olive Palmer laid her work aside and sat thinking of other days. Everything about her seemed so dreary and drowsy that she could not work this afternoon. Even David was not putting, but lay curled up in a little ball at his mistress's feet, fast asleep.

Olive had changed very little, only she was a trifle sad at times, and there was a new sweetness in her face and manner since Abe went away. Suddenly, as she sat there under the trees, something occurred that aroused her attention and drove away her reverie. A team was driving up to the next house, which had long been unoccupied; a team laden with furniture.

"For the land sale?" cried Olive, softly. "Who can be moving into the old Miller house, I wonder?" "Almira," she called in a low tone, "come here. We're going to have some new neighbors."

Almira appeared at the door. "They ain't much," she sniffed, "or they wouldn't be moving into that old, dilapidated house." The furniture that went to the next house was evidently costly, or had been, for it was in a rather disabled condition, and showed evident signs of ill usage.

After the furniture came a carriage, from which alighted a tall, ungainly man, with an exceedingly plain face and a slight limp. He assisted a sharp-eyed, ferret-eyed woman to the ground. After her came two of the most forlorn looking little people Olive had ever seen. The youngest, a girl of eight, was clad in a pink dress, which came to the heels, and a hat that beggared description. The boy, a lad of ten, was arrayed in a suit full two sizes too large for him. The whole family wore an air of the most woeful neglect.

"Well," remarked Almira, after she had observed them in silence for a few minutes, "folks talk nowadays about their ancestors coming over in the Mayflower, but I'm sure these folks came right out of it, furniture and all." "He's lame an' the furniture's lame. The whole tribe looks about a hundred years old."

Indeed, the little girl seemed the only lively thing among them, and she was laughing and dancing about like any happy child of her age. The remainder of the afternoon passed very quickly with the two women, who watched the proceedings of the new family with great curiosity.

One thing they could not decide, whether the sharp-eyed woman was mistress of the house or servant. This new interest served as a topic of conversation for the two lonely maidens during several days.

Olive found it very pleasant to speculate about something outside of her own quiet life. After a few days the gentleman next door began to go away at a certain time each morning and come back again each evening.

Olive was pleased to see that the children always went to the gate with him, and that he always kissed them tenderly when he left them.

She felt a curious sense of relief one morning when she heard him call back: "Maggie, you may have tea at five to-night," and heard a voice reply: "Yes, sir."

"She ain't his wife, she's help," Olive informed Almira. "An' I'm kind of glad."

"Don't see what it is to you if his wife is a Fiji Islander," responded Almira. "Nor I, either," laughed her mistress. "Only he's such a soft-spoken, kind-lookin' man that I'd like him to have a good wife."

In a short time Olive discovered that the help was cross and incapable. The children were dirty and neglected, and, during their father's absence, they were scolded and slapped without mercy.

Olive was very indignant, but Almira told her tenderly that if she was going to begin, at her age, to manage her neighbor's affairs, she would have her hands full.

One day David wandered into the neighbor's yard, and the little girl chased him home, calling: "Kitty, kitty," and trying to catch him, much to his disgust.

Olive, who dearly loved children, called the little one to her, and soon had her on her lap, enjoying a seed cake and a story at the same time.

In a short time the little boy arrived in search of his sister. He raised his hat, saying, in a quaint, grown-up way: "I've come for my sister. Thank the lady, Sylvia, for the cake."

"What is your name, little boy?" asked Olive.

"My name," he replied soberly, "is David Leonard, and that's father's name, too. My mother's gone to Heaven," he continued, feeling with a child's quick instinct that he had a sympathetic listener.

"Maggie's only the servant. She slaps us sometimes, but I don't tell father, 'cause it would make him feel bad, and I don't mind much, only when she hurts Sylvia."

David told his new friend many other things which made her heart ache for the two neglected children.

At length they went away, promising to come again soon.

They kept their promise, and nearly every afternoon was spent with Olive, who told them fairy stories or taught Sylvia to make doll's clothes.

Almira Powers grew much attached to the quiet, respectful boy, who helped her shell peas or pick beans, and who often filled her woodbox.

But Olive's heart went out to merry, willful Sylvia.

The scoldings on the other side of the fence grew more frequent, and sometimes lasted from morning till night with little cessation.

One day the children were playing in their own yard when suddenly Maggie rushed out of the house, and, seizing Sylvia by the arm, gave her a slap in the face.

David came valiantly to his sister's rescue, but received a blow which made him cry out in pain.

Then suddenly a tall, gaunt figure jumped the fence, and, swooping down like an enraged eagle, encircled both children in her arms.

It was Almira Powers, who had from her window witnessed Maggie's attack on the children and had rushed to their rescue.

"You teach them children spin, if you dare," she cried, her very hair standing out straight in her wrath.

"You miser'ble sneak'n' critter, I can hardly keep my hands off of you!"

"Come, David," she continued, taking Sylvia in her arms, "come right over to our house an' stay till yer pa comes, an' then we'll tell him a few things he don't know."

Maggie hurled a few expletives after them, of which Almira took no notice whatever.

Olive took the trembling, sobbing child in her lap and rocked her gently to sleep, while Almira gave David a piece of maple sugar large enough to wreck the health of any ordinary child.

The mother feeling awake in Olive's heart and filled her with bitter yearning as she looked down into the tear-stained little face. The child's gentle breathing was now and then broken by a heavy sigh.

Olive held the child until the father came, dreaming many tender dreams as she clasped the tiny form to her bosom.

When Mr. Leonard came home he sought his children, and listened sadly to the story his neighbor told him.

"Of course Maggie must go," he said, decidedly. "Why did the children never tell me?"

Tears filled his eyes when Olive told him what David had said.

"Poor little fellow," he said. "I can never thank you enough for your interest in my little ones, you and Miss Powers."

"Well," said Almira, "I ain't a heathen, an' I couldn't see them young ones abused by that critter."

A few days later Mr. Leonard went over at sunset to tell the two women that he had secured a kindly, middle-aged servant to take care of his house and children.

He was a painfully shy man, so Olive talked the more to set him at ease, and they soon became quite friendly.

When he went away he presented a box of strawberries very awkwardly, speaking again of their kindness to the children.

So it came about quite naturally for Mr. Leonard to spend the evening frequently with his two neighbors, or sometimes with Olive alone. She was so frank and self-forgetful that he felt more at ease with her than he had ever felt with any woman before.

Sometimes on Sunday evenings Mr. Leonard brought the children, and they all sang while Olive played the seraphine as of yore. But Mr. Leonard's voice was a deep baritone.

One night, as they sat alone on the little porch in the moonlight, he told Olive his sad story.

Years before, he had fallen in love with a pretty working girl, who, he believed, also loved him. He found out late that she cared nothing for him, and had only married him for his money. She did not seem to care for her children, either, but found them a burden.

Mr. Leonard tried vainly to win her love. She grew more and more discontented, till one day, when David was two years old and Sylvia a baby in the cradle, he came home one night to find his house dark and desolate, his babies crying and his wife gone.

Two years after he received a letter telling him of his wife's penitence and begging for help.

He went to her at once, and found her poor and dying.

She never asked for her children. He took care of her till she died, then buried her, and placed a stone at her grave.

"I ought to have known," he said, humbly, "that a pretty little thing like her couldn't love a homely, ungainly man like me."

A great wave of tenderness and pity for the lonely man surged up in Olive's womanly heart.

So she said, eagerly: "That don't make no difference with a woman, Mr. Leonard! She don't mind how a good, kind man with a great kind heart like yours looks! Not if she's the right kind."

He looked up at her queerly. "Do you mean that?" he asked, softly.

"Yes," replied Olive, earnestly, never realizing what dangerous ground she was treading.

He held her hand for a moment, when he went away, saying: "Thank you, Olive, you don't know how much your sympathy means to me."

And Olive sat still after midnight by the window thinking of Mr. Leonard's sad story.

A few evenings after he found Olive alone on the porch. He was very silent all the evening, but when he went away he took her hand and said abruptly:

"Olive, you said that a woman didn't mind a man's looks, and those words make me dare to tell you that I love you and need you. Will you be my wife?"

Olive looked at him a moment, the color coming to her face.

"For the land sale?" she exclaimed. "I hope you didn't think I said that to make you propose. I'm sure I never thought of such a thing."

"I know it," he replied. "It was your perfect unconsciousness that attracted me. You never remember yourself."

She looked at him with great solemn eyes. "Are you sure you love me, or do you want me to keep your house and look after your children? A woman ain't never so old or homely that she won't resent that."

"Before God, I love you," he said. "Do you think I could ask any one whom I did not love to marry me after my experience?"

"Yes," said Olive, "I think I can love you well, and be a good wife to you, but I have loved some one else better."

"But then, you have, too, an' maybe that'll only draw us closer together. Some day I'll tell you all about it."

Olive did not make elaborate preparations this time, and as for Almira, Mr. Leonard told her the news himself.

"Pooh!" said that dame, coolly. "I've known that longer than you ten have yourself. I ain't blind."

Olive bought a soft brown stuff for her wedding dress, and one day she brought out the blue-colored silk and said to Almira, carelessly: "Here's a dress pattern I never made up. You may have it if you like."

The wedding was very quiet, and that night, as Olive stood by the children's little bed with her husband's arm around her, she said: "I'm so happy that I'm afraid. I'm inside now, ain't I?"

He stooped and kissed her, saying: "Yes, love, you are inside my heart forever."

"Well," soliloquized Almira, as she looked around her new room. "I've got a job to clean up an' get the furniture mended. I'm thankful Olive ain't done no worse."

"She wouldn't enjoy marryin' a man with no one about him, because she couldn't pity and console him, then. I only wonder she didn't take a blind or a deaf and dumb one."

"I'm thankful that Mr. Leonard only limps an' has an alkilkin' homely face. He's so meek he'll let me do as I like, too, so if she's satisfied, I am."

—Boston Budget.

A Notable Year.

During the year 1905 the advance in electrical inventions was such as to make the year remarkable in this respect, if in no other. The completion of some of the largest electric-light plants in the world, and the adaptation of the newest inventions and appliances in this line, made it possible to furnish power at a wonderfully reduced rate, and has laid the foundation for the prosperity of a great many small establishments. One of the interesting phases of electric power is that there is no dirt, no rubbish, no cleaning up to do, no engineer required, and no firing up necessary. You press the button, so to speak, and the power is ready on demand. One of the longest lines of transmission is that from the Fresno plant in California, which is carried a distance of 25 miles. The Niagara Falls plant is one of the wonders of the world, the company underselling steam power and promising such further reduction in price that the eyes of manufacturers are already turned in this direction. In Philadelphia a battery is running that carries 12,000 lamps. The storage battery is attracting general attention, and new uses for it and new demonstrations of its value are taking place every day. —N. Y. Ledger.

A Mexican Warrior Dead.

The death of Gen. Guadalupe Lopez, who died of pneumonia a few days ago, removes one of Mexico's greatest generals. He was a full-blooded Indian, and was considered a great Indian fighter, coping with the savages with their own tactics. His universal kindness had won for him throughout the republic the title of "Uncle Lopez."

—It is said that some of the big millers and bakers have found a way to adulterate wheat by a mixture of cornmeal.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE NEW UMBRELLA.

Oh, Ella! With her first umbrella! She walked abroad like any queen. She held it proudly for display. Admired its handle, stroked its sheen. And never little girl more gay.

Dear Ella! Such a wee umbrella! One day upon the market-place I met her, dripping with her curls. She looked, despite her sunny face, The most forlorn of little girls.

—Why, Ella! Where's your new umbrella? Still is the storm has drenched your hair! Just see your frock! Just see your hat! And what is this you hug with care?—A broom, a dillie, or a cat?

Oh, Ella! With her first umbrella! She looked at me and shyly spoke. The rain-drops pelted on her yet: "I have it here beneath my cloak. Because, you see, it might get wet!" —Agnes Lee, in St. Nicholas.

JEALOUS LIZARDS.

They Should Their Anger When Their Owners Fought Others.

M. J. Delboeuf, a French scientist, declares that lizards are actuated by feelings of love and may even become victims of jealousy. In an article which he wrote for a French scientific review, he tells about two lizards which he kept in his house for several years, both of which evinced unmistakable evidences of being troubled by the same green-eyed monster which occasionally plays havoc with the affairs of human beings.

"My first two lizards had been captured—one in the Spanish Pyrenees and the other at Tarn in France, wherefore I called them the Spanish and the French lizards, but afterwards gave them the names Pedro and Pierre," says M. Delboeuf.

The two lizards lived on the best of terms for several months. Pedro was fond of following Pierre around, and when Pierre one day was missing the other was sad and disconsolate.

It was three weeks before the lost lizard was found, and then he was discovered under the stair carpet, where he had probably been all the time. In the meantime another lizard was secured. The first two were males, while the last corner was a female. Her advent brought on war between the two former friends, which became so fierce that they had to be placed in separate cages and released one at a time.

"Pedro was jealous of my preference and caresses," continued the scientist. "When he was on my sleeve I could keep him for hours motionless by passing my hand lightly along his body; but if I took Pierre or another lizard up his rage broke out at once, and he would jump upon him with his mouth menacingly wide open."

"If, however, I chose the large lizard, he gradually drew back, as if regretfully, without leaving me. Now, what good do caresses do a lizard? Dogs and cats, they tell us, are delighted with them. But these animals, when they were young, were caressed by their mothers, who licked, bit and amused them, and it is not strange that they should find in our caresses a kind of recollection of motherly tenderness. They play together, embrace one another and press against one another. The man who plays with them is like a companion of a little more respectable species, and that is all."

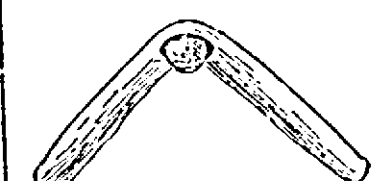

"In menageries, monkeys, bears, lions, tigers and hyenas indulge in caresses to the point that some animals seek them and provoke them. But lizards, with their scaly skin, accustomed to embracing, feeling and licking, hatched in the sun! My Pedro, therefore, presented a deviation of the feeling of jealousy."

SIMPLE NUT CRACKER.

Made of the Flexible Branch of Any Hard-Wood Tree.

A nut cracker which will be found very serviceable may be made of the flexible branch of a tree—green hickory, walnut or tough oak wood preferred. In the center of piece of branch selected, which should be seven or eight inches long and about one inch thick, cut a niche an inch long, and so deep as to leave only a few fibers of wood and the bark intact. This flexible band will remain as a hinge to connect the two ends of the branch. Place the nut to be cracked in the niche and bring the handles together, and the nut will be crushed as neatly as if the cracker was of steel.—Chicago Record.

Beetle as Undertaker.

There is a species of beetle in Australia which act the role of energetic undertakers that carefully bury carcasses left on the soil. As soon as they smell a fellow-mouse, a mole or a fish in a state of decomposition, they come by troops to bury it, getting under the body, hollowing out the ground with their legs and projecting the rubbish they dig out in all directions. Little by little the carcass sinks, and at the end of 24 hours the hole is several inches deep. They then mount it, cast the earth down into the grave so as to fill it and hide the body from sight. The females will then lay their eggs in the tomb, where the larvae will afterward find an abundance of food.

Working and Waiting.

If you have any waiting to do, work while you wait. Working is the only thing that will make time fly. Watching the clock is the surest way to make a moment an hour, and working will make an hour seem like a moment.

SOME NEW GAMES.

They Are Not Less Amusing Because They Are Instructive.

Only bright youngsters can successfully play games like the two which are described below, but when such children take part in them, they are not only interesting but also exceedingly instructive and stimulating.

The leader of the game prepares as many paper caps as there are children to join in the game. Across the front of each cap the name of an author or a book is written in large print letters. The caps are then placed on the heads of the children—not by themselves, but by the leader—in such a way that no one sees the name on his own cap. The game is then a game of guess—that is, each player is kept busy trying to guess the name on his own cap, the only clue being afforded by the questions asked of him by the other players.

One bright lad was much puzzled a few moments by such questions as these:

"How is the word 'jugal' spelled?" "How would you divide the word 'singer,' please?" "Has 'real' one or two syllables?"

None of these questions gave the lad any light, but the next revealed the name on his cap:

"Please give me the definition of 'pschydermatous,' and tell me whether I pronounce it correctly."

"I have," declared the boy. "I must be the dictionary."

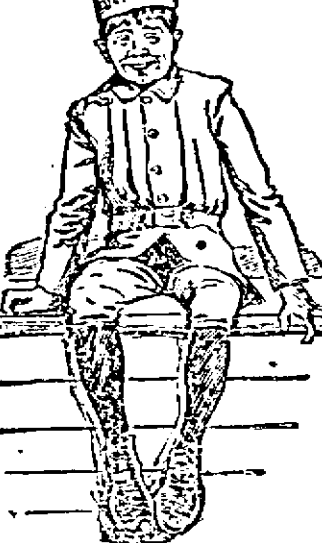

And so he was. "Books" is the best name for the form of the game just indicated, but if the queries were like those which follow, "Author Questions" would be a better title:

"What was it 'Bill Sykes' kept seeing after 'Nancy's' murder?"

"Can you tell me why 'Nicholas Nickleby' whipped 'Old Squeers'?"

"Why was 'Mr. Dorrit' thrown into prison?"

Anyone who has read the stories written by the Master of Gad's Hill will know his own cap to be labeled

"I MUST BE THE DICTIONARY."

Charles Dickens, if he is queried after this fashion.

The game of "Initials" requires a nimble wit. It also requires pretty accurate general knowledge of persons who are uppermost. The point is, when the name of some living celebrity is mentioned, to characterize the celebrity in two or three words beginning with the letters which make the celebrity's initials, as, for instance:

Chatterbox M. Depew—Celebrated Merry Diner.

Clydes S. Grant—Uncle Sam's General.

Harriet Beecher Stowe—Helped Black Slaves.

Fridolf Nansen—Fleeing Northward.

Louise M. Alcott—Lovely, Motherly Authoress.

R. E. Peary—Racing Ever Poleward.

Thomas W. Carlyle—Terrifying, Witty, Critical.

Not all these examples are beyond criticism, but as they are reported directly from a gathering of young folks, held not long ago, they show pretty conclusively that the game has an educational value.

Played the reverse way, it would require even better knowledge of prominent personages and their traits—thus:

Thoroughly Able Electrician—Thomas Alva Edison.

Character Delineator—Charles Dickens.

Ever Excellent Songstress—Emma Eames Store.

In the case of popular authors there may be variations; "Hiawatha's Wondrous Love-song," for instance, was declared an excellent three-word key to "Henry Wadsworth Longfellow" at a gathering of young folks, the other evening.

This Dog Acts as Valet.

Undoubtedly one of the most intelligent dogs in the country is Alexander C. Young's litter and white-mottled full-blooded highway setter "Frank."

Young lives in Hightown, Somerset county, N. J., and he has taught his dog to bring his clothes to him in the morning when he wishes to rise and dress, to carry notes wherever he is directed and to perform various other duties that richer men than Mr. Young intrust only to their valets. Among other things Frank carries wood into the house when Young chops it. He has on some occasions carried as many as 50 or 60 sticks, one at a time, from the woodpile into the house without cessation, and he seems to enjoy this and every other of the pieces of work he is directed to do.

He Was the Compass.

OREGON WOMEN.

How They Were Coaxed Into the Territory in Early Days.

"There are plenty of women in Oregon now," observed a prominent Oregon politician who is here to see that that state is not forgotten in the matter of patronage during the next administration, "but it is within the memory of many of us when women were very scarce there. We gave it out that we wanted them for school teachers and the like and encouraged them to come out there, but the truth was the men wanted them for wives. I remember once we sent a young man to Massachusetts, where he was well acquainted, with orders to collect 100 young women and to escort them back to Oregon. We guaranteed every one of them one year's employment. The active man in the matter was a fine looking young man, who afterwards served two terms in congress from our state. He spent two months in selecting the party, and started west with them. On the trip out he courted one of the school teachers on his own hook and actually got her consent to a marriage on the arrival of the train at Portland. The boys howled considerably about it, claiming that he had treated them unfairly in having first choice, but there was a lot of fine marriageable material left. Some of these women are today the leading ladies of the society of the state. More than three-fourths of the hundred were married inside of three years, and many in less than one year. A few of the lot, however, are teaching school there today, not that they did not have offers, but because they would not accept any of the fellows who offered themselves. Now that Senator Mitchell has about given up his contest to return as senator, he will likely be succeeded by a gentleman who married one of the party of school teachers to which I refer. He will bring his wife here with him, and your Washington folks can see for themselves the kind of ladies we had out there for school teachers. They can't be surprised, even if equalled, anywhere. I may be an interested person, though, for it happens that my wife was one of the same party."—Washington Star.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a running ear or a deaf ear, and when it is inflamed the deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE NATIONAL CIRCUIT.

It Will Probably Open in the South This Year.

The Crackjacks Are Training in Savannah, Ga.—Johnson and Michael to Ride in Competition—One on Deck.

(Special Chicago Letter.) Speculation is rife now regarding the national bicycle circuit for 1907. The indications point to the probable starting of it in the south instead of in California as last year. President Potter's unavoidable delay in appointing a successor to Chairman Gibson, of the racing board, who declined the office again when the reappointment was tendered him, made it necessary for the new appointee to extend the time for receiving applications for sanctions to April 15. Albert Mott, of Baltimore, ex-chief consul of the Maryland division L. A. W., was tendered the appointment early in March at the fifteenth annual banquet of the Maryland Bicycle club. He was previously chairman of the Maryland division racing board, chairman of the national transportation and rules and regulations committee, and a member of the highway improvement committee.

(Chairman L. A. W. Racing Board.)

Owing to the delay in selecting Mr. Mott, it will be impossible to start the circuit before the middle of May. That will be too late to make the start on the Pacific coast, since it would not allow enough time for the circuit chasers to cover the southern territory and reach Massachusetts for the great Decoration day meet in Boston, which is an annual fixture and is practically the opening meet of the season in the north. Moreover, the cities in California, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas and Louisiana will not apply for sanctions unless they can have races on Sunday, as they cannot draw paying gates on working days, and since the league forbids that this is an additional reason why the circuit is almost certain to start somewhere in the south east of the Mississippi.

In all probability the first national circuit meet in '07 will be held in Tennessee in conjunction with one of the race meets on the southern indoor circuit, variously designated as the Coliseum and Jack Prince circuit. This opened at Memphis on the 21st of April, and it is likely that a number of the crackjacks will ride in this circuit until the opening of the national circuit, which may occur as a joint meet of a week's duration at any of the points included in the Coliseum circuit. The two would then coincide, the Coliseum circuit being followed through Memphis, Chattanooga, Atlanta and Montgomery to Jacksonville, Fla. Then, if time permits, national circuit meets may be given in Savannah, Ga., and Charlotte, N. C., where a new race track is being projected.

Already the crackjacks are gathering in the south to train for the season. The old cement track in Savannah will be the general training ground.

TOM ECK.
(Leading Bicycle Trainer in America.)

James Michael, the little Welshman, and Tom Cooper are in training there under the care of "Mother" Webb, Cooper's trainer. The manager of the team of which these two stars are members, which is the largest team in the country, is also quartered in Savannah, where he is endeavoring to draw the other first-class speed merchants of the land. Dave Shafer, training manager of the team, who has just concluded a three-weeks' indoor tournament in San Francisco, is in Savannah with such well-known riders as Otto Zeigler, Fred Longhead, Charlie Wells, Orlando Stevens, Floyd McFarland and others. These men are already in condition and may at once enter the Coliseum circuit. Arthur Garkner, accompanied by James Bowler, is expected to join the training party, and Conn Baker, Charles Murphy and Frank Jony, who trained in Savannah last spring, are likely to go there again this year as soon as they secure engagements with manufacturers. It is even asserted that the great Arthur Augustus Zimmerman will go into training on the Savannah track with the intention of learning what amount of speed is left in him. F. C. Hall is training in Louisville, and Earl Kiser is in Tennessee, riding on the Coliseum circuit.

WOMAN AND HOME.

ALL THE RAGE NOW.

The Charming Dresden Style of Decoration for China.

The Dresden style of decoration for china is always in favor, and no one who attempts to paint upon china at the present time can afford to be ignorant of its characteristic features. The painting is always done upon the white ware, as the tinted grounds are never used for Dresden. The flowers, figures and other devices employed are not outlined in any way, as is done in all other styles of china painting. Pure, bright colors are employed, quite in contrast to the soft, mellow tones sought in Royal Worcester. The shading of the flowers is intense and sharp, and vivid contrasts of color are often seen.

Gold scrollwork is largely employed, often in relief, and sometimes a plain panel of a dark color is outlined between the bits of decoration.

There is for sale in the art stores a complete line of Dresden colors intended for this style of decoration exclusively, but unless a specialty is made of this line of work, the La Croix colors may be used with entirely satisfactory results. Care must be taken, however, in selecting the colors to be used, choosing those only which are intense and pure in tone, and avoiding all the soft and "muddy" shades.

The gold work, both plain and raised, is done as in other styles of decoration already described. The paints are prepared for use in the same manner, but there is no soft blending in tones in shading, and, as already stated, no outline of color is employed.

The design shown herewith is a good example of the Dresden style of decoration. It is desirable for dinner or tea cups and saucers.

To paint this in La Croix colors, first tint the plain panels a bright yellow, using silver yellow for the purpose.

Next draw the flower sprays upon the plain white china, and paint them with the local colors, using carmine No. 2 rather than the roses, and leaving the white china itself for the highest lights. The leaves are of apple-green, the small flowers of deep blue green. The half flowers showing upon either side of the cup are treated with a purple, made by mixing deep purple and deep blue. The dots and scrolls are raised gold. The paste for these must be mixed and applied, and the pieces are then ready for their first firing.

When this is done the flowers should be retouched, the sharp contrasts of shade being added which have already been mentioned as a feature of the Dresden ware. The roses should be shaded with deep purple in the centers, and the leaves with brown green laid on in sharp touches. The centers of the purple flowers should also be strengthened with deep blue, perhaps modified a little with the deep purple.

The dots and scrolls may now be covered with the gold; dry thoroughly and then add a second coat. Let all become thoroughly dry and then send to its second and last firing.

The gold should next be burnished, and given a high luster, after which the work will be complete.—N. Y. Tribune.

Frocks for Small Girls.

"It is no longer considered necessary," writes Emma M. Hooper, in the Ladies' Home Journal, "to set aside certain fabrics for little girls' wear, as nowadays they wear everything that their mothers do, except real lace and jewels. Care is taken, however, to use only small-patterned materials for their frocks. In colors, white is always in good taste, also baby blue and pink, and this spring green is very much in vogue, as well as golden brown, red, French and navy blue, pearl gray and pale yellow. Black is used only as a trimming in velvet ribbon or mohair braid. Satin and taffeta ribbons are used as trimmings, also white, yellowish and linen-colored embroideries. Valenciennes and net top-laces are used in white and butter shades with insertion to match."

White and Gold Blazer.

White and gold china enables one to set a lovely table for a white and gold tea or a white and gold dinner, using gold-colored flowers and gold-colored ribbons for decorations. The laces may be yellow, the cake icings and trimmings may be of the same hue, and tall lamps, with yellow shades, will throw a soft, golden light over the festive scene. Beautiful tea and dinner gowns are made in white and gold, and if the hostess has golden hair and a pure white complexion she will look like a fairy princess at a magic banquet.

How to Curl Feathers.

Feathers may easily be curled, if only a little time and care be devoted to them. A simple process is as follows: Have a large kettle with steam pouring out of the spout. Hold the feathers in this steam for a few moments, and then with a blunt knife (preferably a metal paper cutter) curl each separate plume, and when complete, hold the feather in front of the fire to keep the stiffness in. Professional dressers do little else, but, of course, they are more expert than a mere amateur.

AN OPEN LETTER.

From the Herald, Sauk Centre, Minn.

The following communication was recently received by the manufacturers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People: Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

"I was born in Germany and am thirty-seven years old. I live with my husband on a farm. For ten years I suffered with leucorrhoea so that I was a burden to my friends and myself. I have tried a great many doctors and different kinds of medicine without securing any benefit. My condition had become so deplorable that I had almost given up hope of recovery, when one day I saw in the Sauk Centre Herald an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as a drowning man catches at a straw, so I grabbed this chance and purchased from Hanson & Emerson a box of Pink Pills. I commenced taking them in March, 1896, and after taking one box I felt so much improved that I bought more."

"After taking them for a time I found to my surprise that I was getting cured. Ever since then I have been as strong and well as any woman, and am able to do the arduous duties which fall to the lot of a farmer's wife without feeling the least fatigue or inconvenience."

"I hope this will be the means of placing your wonderful pills in the hands of my sister, and that she may rejoice with me. I am satisfied that no woman need suffer as I did, when such an efficient remedy is so close at hand."

(Signed) MRS. H. STENERAGEL.
Subscribed before me this 19th day of December, 1896.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to women, such as suppression, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and hollow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

It has been said that the convenience of one age become the necessities of the next; but no ordinarily sane man will contend that the necessities of one age should become the inconveniences of the next. The binding was done by hand, and the left hand binder was a necessity. The grain fell on the platform of the harvester and was delivered into the receiver with its heads toward the rear of the machine. The men stood in the receiver facing the grain. With the left hand machine the heads of the grain are at the left hand of the man doing the binding, so in taking out the grain with the hand around it, whether the man turned to the front table or to the back table he kept his position toward the bundle itself—that is, with the heads toward his left hand; hence, in making the tack he shoved the ends under the head of the bundle. This is handled by the shocker by grasping into the heads, as shown in the illustration, and the tack should therefore be toward the heads, so that it will not pull out.

The hand binding harvester with men to do the binding is out of date, and so is the left hand machine, which has been superseded by the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, the success of which makes it seem highly probable that the left hand harvester is a thing of the past.

The application of roller bearings to grain cutting machinery was made by J. G. Perry in 1899, and his patent, No. 66,781, for an improved reaper, showed and described various ways of using rollers and rollers in connection with the reaper. In view of these facts it is somewhat amusing to read the claims of a certain reaper maker of the present day, who says he was the first to introduce roller bearings in harvesting machinery. As a matter of fact this manufacturer is comparatively a beginner in the art of reaper building and has originated nothing.

Unquestionably the most practical and satisfactory application of roller bearings to binders and mowers has been made by the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company. The particular form used by them was patented in 1892 and is now to be found in all McCormick machines. The especially valuable feature of the McCormick roller bearing is seen in the form or cage as it is called, which holds the rollers from running together, and for any cause the rollers taken from the shaft the rollers will not fall out and get lost. In order to avoid the McCormick patent the other harvesting machine company who claims to be the originator of roller bearings in harvesters has put out the metal in the ring at the ends of the rollers. If the cage is bent the rollers slip out and become filled with grit, or worse, get lost.

The methods of the McCormick Company result in an annual saving of many thousands of dollars to the farming public. New devices are not embodied in their machines until long and efficient trials have shown them to be practical. It has been the same with the roller bearings with everything else—McCormick experimenting is done at McCormick's expense, and not at the expense of the farmers, who are too often duped by manufacturers who rush into print for notoriety and fill the market with impractical forms.

THE ADVANCE AGENT OF HEALTH.

Success and Its Cause.

The phenomenal popularity of the guns and ammunition made by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., is not surprising when the great pains and care taken by this celebrated house to put nothing but perfect goods on the market is considered. Every gun they make is tested for strength, action and accuracy and unless it comes up to the high Winchester standard it never leaves the factory. Winchester ammunition is made with equal care, every different cartridge or load being tested before it is loaded for market. Winchester guns and ammunition are unequaled as results show. Illustration, and the tack should therefore be toward the heads, so that it will not pull out.

The hand binding harvester with men to do the binding is out of date, and so is the left hand machine, which has been superseded by the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, the success of which makes it seem highly probable that the left hand harvester is a thing of the past.

The application of roller bearings to grain cutting machinery was made by J. G. Perry in 1899, and his patent, No. 66,781, for an improved reaper, showed and described various ways of using rollers and rollers in connection with the reaper. In view of these facts it is somewhat amusing to read the claims of a certain reaper maker of the present day, who says he was the first to introduce roller bearings in harvesting machinery. As a matter of fact this manufacturer is comparatively a beginner in the art of reaper building and has originated nothing.

Unquestionably the most practical and satisfactory application of roller bearings to binders and mowers has been made by the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company. The particular form used by them was patented in 1892 and is now to be found in all McCormick machines. The especially valuable feature of the McCormick roller bearing is seen in the form or cage as it is called, which holds the rollers from running together, and for any cause the rollers taken from the shaft the rollers will not fall out and get lost. In order to avoid the McCormick patent the other harvesting machine company who claims to be the originator of roller bearings in harvesters has put out the metal in the ring at the ends of the rollers. If the cage is bent the rollers slip out and become filled with grit, or worse, get lost.

The methods of the McCormick Company result in an annual saving of many thousands of dollars to the farming public. New devices are not embodied in their machines until long and efficient trials have shown them to be practical. It has been the same with the roller bearings with everything else—McCormick experimenting is done at McCormick's expense, and not at the expense of the farmers, who are too often duped by manufacturers who rush into print for notoriety and fill the market with impractical forms.

We know a man who refuses to wear glasses because it would be an acknowledgment that he is growing older.—Washington Democrat.

For a Place on the Medical Board.

The medical law just passed by our legislature provides for a board of seven physicians, to be chosen from among the best physicians of the state. Dr. F. R. Reynolds, of Eau Claire, is being urged for a position on this board, and if good work in securing the passage of the bill and good qualifications count for anything, we cannot see why he is not entitled to the position. His home papers speak in the highest terms of him as a man and an eminent physician, and he is receiving the hearty support of all the papers in that locality. The following article regarding him is taken from the Sunday Sentinel:

One of the most effective workers for the medical bill before the legislature has been Dr. F. R. Reynolds, of Eau Claire. He is a well-known, experienced specialist in diseases and surgery of the eye, ear, nose and throat. He was born in La Crosse, and is the son of the late Hon. B. W. Reynolds, one of the first settlers there, prominent in politics in this state, whose brothers were all extensive slaveholders in the South, while he was a pronounced abolitionist.

The older Reynolds was also a delegate to the famous Free Soil convention in Kansas, and held the office of receiver of public moneys in the St. Croix district under President Lincoln. He frequently contributed able articles of public interest to the press under the cognomen of "Thunder," "Syrinx," and "Rex."

His son, Dr. F. R. Reynolds, began his career as an associate of the late Dr. Barry, for many years a well-known specialist in Northwestern Wisconsin at Menomonie, and after his death Dr. Reynolds became his successor. In 1891 he removed from there to Eau Claire as a more central locality and wider field of practice.

He is a graduate of Rush Medical College, he has taken special courses at the best institutions in Chicago and New York City, and has studied in the best schools of London and Vienna. He is a member of the American Medical Association, Wisconsin State Medical Society, Anglo-American Medical Association, Vienna Eight International Ophthalmological Congress, Edinburgh, etc.

He has invented a number of novel and useful instruments, increasing the armamentum of specialists in his line of practice. He is noted for his kindness and consideration in treating the afflicted poor and needy for slight compensation and thereby without charge, and is said to be a constant worker and student in his profession.

He is a frequent contributor to a number of medical journals and the author of some able papers of professional and literary merit, and reputed as an able translator of German medical literature into English.

He is credited with having performed many of the most delicate operations in the line of his profession with eminent skill and success. His high standard of medical ethics is said to be his ruling motive in the active efforts he has made among the medical profession of the state in behalf of the medical bill.

The new corrupt practices act will effect some unique contributions to literature if Ohio official statements are to be used as precedents. Here is one penned by a candidate for justice of the peace at Portsmouth, Ohio:

Livery Hire.....Nothing.
Whisky.....Nothing.
Cigars.....Nothing.
Taking the boys to see a man.....Nothing.
Printing.....Nothing.
Hiring teams.....Nothing.

The venerable President Stealy, of Amherst college, since gone to his rest, was once elected to Congress at the expenditure of only a single postage stamp.—State Journal.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.
From the Fairhaven (N. Y.) Register.

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states that for twenty-five years his wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her as much good. ### Monster of Many Horns.

A lovable spirit, or black hound, was discovered last fall by J. S. Shepard, of Rhineland, Wis.—(Timberman).

The hound has a curlew horn upon its mammoth nose. Another from the head, it seems, to great discomfiture of the hound.

With these two horns, one would think, it might be made clear. For if the hound should "roll" he'd smash Or else he'd find that up-side down he'd stink a day or two.

And when attacked, unless by birds, that would do much harm. There's little in the row of horns to cause one much alarm. Unless he could turn in the air and make a flying work.

Of anything it was beneath by land on his neck. And yet it seems quite possible, so many horns are found. It may be proved a native of the state where horns are found. And it should be ready so, as many have maintained. It hails from old Kentucky and the mystery is explained.

IS ON THE WRAPPER OF EVERY BOTTLE OF CASTORIA

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow anyone to tell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.
